Art and Literature

Most of the art and literature expressed American society on its rough edges and the natural sides of it. Many writers attacked the American society with savage irony. This art and literature expressed what people thought of America and the new style of work that came with the Jazz Age.

Lost Generation

The lost generation were a group of poets and writers who despised America's new society and image. Most of them fled America and did not want to deal with the society. They found places in Europe more cultured and found Europe more intellectually stimulating.
